Argument In Favor of Reapportionment of Legislative Districts Referendum Measure

A vote "yes" will sustain the law—the so-called "Boggs Reapportionment Act"—enacted by the state legislature in 1927 by UNANIMOUS VOTE. The law was enacted in obedience to the mandate of the voters, who, at the general election of 1926, adopted the Federal Plan of Representation in the state legislature, by an amendment to the California constitution, which received a majority of over 74,000 votes and a majority vote in 57 of the 58 counties of the state.

Opponents of the Federal Plan of Representation, unwilling to accept the decision of the people made in 1926, are attempting to void or to delay the enforcement of this provision by calling for a popular referendum.

The growth of population in California in the last twenty years has made unjust and intolerable the present apportionment of representation in the state legislature which is based on the 1910 census of 1910 and on former provisions of the California constitution now repealed. Due to the unprecedented development of the two great urban regions of the state, were apportionment to be based on the repealed provisions of the constitution and the federal census of 1920, political power would be consolidated in the inhabitants of 3 per cent of the area of the state.

The constitution of California, as now amended, has enabled the legislature to pass a law that recognizes the right of 97 per cent of the territory of the state to a fair representation.

This plan is called the "Federal Plan" because its principle is that of the federal constitution for representation in congress. It is the principle, generally respected in all representative government, that there are two factors in apportionment—population and territory.

Besides our federal government, thirty states of the Union base representation in their legislatures upon this principle. These states include New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Iowa and Ohio.

The Boggs Reapportionment Act is sponsored by all the agricultural interests of California. It is also supported by chambers of commerce, women's clubs, and civic organizations generally throughout the state. It creates a well-balanced legislature in which neither the cities nor the countryside may predominate. It is a just, wholesome, and necessary provision. It will give better legislature than is possible under the present law, and will bring to a conclusion a controversy which has long affected the best interests of this great commonwealth. The act is a just, conscientious and carefully framed law. It deserves to be sustained. Vote yes on Proposition Number One on the ballot.

Argument Against Reapportionment of Legislative Districts Referendum Measure

The constitution of this state of 1879 provided, for the purpose of choosing members of the legislature, that the state should be divided into eighty assembly and forty senatorial districts as equal in population as possible.

The apportionment of legislative districts to be made every ten years on the basis of federal census.

Under this provision of the constitution the legislature should have made the apportionment after the census of 1920, but failed to do so. At the election of 1926 an initiative constitutional amendment was adopted by the people, changing the method of dividing the state into senatorial districts. It left the number of senatorial districts at forty as previously provided, but provided that no county or city and county shall contain more than one senatorial district, and counties of small population shall be grouped in districts not to exceed three counties.

The amendment also provided that the legislature at the following session (1927) should reapportion the state in accordance with the constitutional amendment then adopted.

The legislature in 1927, in obedience to this constitutional mandate passed a law by which the state was reapportioned according to the said constitutional amendment.

The old constitution gave Los Angeles County, eight, San Francisco, seven and Alameda County, four senators. By the amendment Los Angeles County loses seven, San Francisco six and Alameda County three senators.

Los Angeles received a small increase in the assembly; San Francisco not only lost six senators but also lost membership in the assembly.

Under the 1920 federal census, Los Angeles County with a population of 936,455, and now paying an estimated amount of 40 per cent cost of state government, would have one vote in forty in the senate. San Francisco with a population of 506,676, now paying an estimated

Argument Against Reapportionment of Legislative Districts Referendum Measure

The constitution of this state of 1879 provided, for the purpose of choosing members of the legislature, that the state should be divided into eighty assembly and forty senatorial districts as equal in population as possible.

The apportionment of legislative districts to be made every ten years on the basis of federal census.

Under this provision of the constitution the legislature should have made the apportionment after the census of 1920, but failed to do so. At the election of 1926 an initiative constitutional amendment was adopted by the people, changing the method of dividing the state into senatorial districts. It left the number of senatorial districts at forty as previously provided, but provided that no county or city and county shall contain more than one senatorial district, and counties of small population shall be grouped in districts not to exceed three counties.

The amendment also provided that the legislature at the following session (1927) should reapportion the state in accordance with the constitutional amendment then adopted.

The legislature in 1927, in obedience to this constitutional mandate passed a law by which the state was reapportioned according to the said constitutional amendment.

The old constitution gave Los Angeles County, eight, San Francisco, seven and Alameda County, four senators. By the amendment Los Angeles County loses seven, San Francisco six and Alameda County three senators.

Los Angeles received a small increase in the assembly; San Francisco not only lost six senators but also lost membership in the assembly.

Under the 1920 federal census, Los Angeles County with a population of 936,455, and now paying an estimated amount of 40 per cent cost of state government, would have one vote in forty in the senate. San Francisco with a population of 506,676, now paying an estimated amount of 28 per cent cost of state government, would have one vote and Alameda with a population of 344,177, now paying a large percentage of the cost of state government, would have one vote. These counties combined with a population of 1,787,308, an excess of 147,755 over the other fifty-five counties and paying at least 74 per cent of the cost of state government would have but three votes out of forty. The increase of population since 1920 makes the inequality and injustice still more pronounced and results in taxation without representation.

The effect of the said constitutional amendment adopted in 1926 was without doubt, for lack of information, misunderstood by the voters. The law passed by the legislature reapportioning the legislative districts is now upon the ticket as a "Referendum" to enable the voters to correct the miscarriage of justice and unfair distribution of representation, and enable the legislature and the people to adopt a fair and equitable basis of representation in the legislature.

There is no logical reason why populated counties and counties containing almost the entire manufacturing, shipping and commercial interests of the state should be deprived of representation and their rights delegated and transferred to small counties and rural districts unacquainted with their necessities.

In justice and fair play vote "NO."
